Unions Mount Attack on Bill

Opposition was mounting today against government legislation which would force construction unions to work with non-affiliated men.

The British Columbia and Yukon Building Trades Council said Friday's mass walk-out by 5,000 plumbers will be followed:

—By a meeting Tuesday in Victoria with Labor Minister James Chabot to present a brief against the legislation—Bill 88;

—By a meeting in conjunc-which would limit school teachers' salary increases. Plumber union business agent Norman Farley estimated the Friday walkout delayed some $700 million worth of construction including major pulp mills, refinery and mining projects in the province.

Opposition Fades As Blarney Views Drive Others Out

Friday and St. Patrick's day -two factors combining to produce sparser-than-usual Commons attendance.

Add in the attitude of many more orthodox, MPs that Social Credit monetary theory is pure blarney and the recipe for a desultory Commons day is complete.

The spiciest parts of the de-bate—on a Social Credit mo-tion that the federal government strip away some of its fiscal and monetary powers and hand them to the prov-inces and municipalities— came when Quebec MPs from all sides of the House did a allttle preparatory skirmishing for the federal election ex-

Fouling the Deep Blue

The continuing threat presented by the freighter now on rocks off the west Coast of Vancouver Island provides a local example of the pollution danger that increasingly is becoming recognized as a major hazard to the viability of the oceans of the world.

Thor Heyerdahl, the Norwegian who sailed a raft across the Atlantic, reported that because of oil and other contamination, he traversed "three thousand miles of garbage." Sir Francis Chichester, the renowned yachtsman, in sailing the Eastern Atlantic and the Mediterranean not long ago, reported a great many oil slicks far out at sea. Other reports from around the globe have made it clear that the oceans are becoming seriously deteriorated by manmade pollution, with as 'yet incalculable effects on marine life, including the vast clouds of plankton which constitute the basic foodstuff of many forms of life, and which may yet become a direct and important constituent of particularly to avoid restrictions man's diet.

With a growing awareness of these problems which threaten what until our era had been thought of as boundless seas of infinite capacity to absorb all that was injected into them, the nations are now preparing to do something before it is too late. A world environmental conference scheduled for June in Stockholm has been preceded by deliberations of a 27nation committee, including Canada, to write proposals to be considered by the main gathering.

But it has become obvious that there will be difficulties in achieving agreement on anti-pollution policies. There are billions of dollars invested in shipping operations, and operators raise vigorous objections to anything that adds to the costs of doing business. Nations drive hard bargains in trying to make gains and avoid costs, and on their profitable shipping and their sovereignty.

However, it will be tragic if the inexorable process of ocean pollution is permitted to continue to the point where the nations are forced to co-operate because sea food sources are disappearing, or the sanitary conditions of coastal states are becoming intolerable. Surely we can call a halt before grim necessity forces us to do what common sense will have failed to achieve.

The costs of remedying pollution will no doubt be engrmous Outlays for prevention may also be high at first, but should certainly pay increasing dividends. The world faces a question not of "why" but of "when", and the longer we delay the harder the task will be.

Where Does It Leave Us?

1607 Britain established its first permanent North American colony at James-town, Virginia. A year later Champlain erected his flimsy Habitation at Quebec and New France was born. From then often fought for its possession but, starting with the fur trade, they agreed beyond question that economic growth and ever-increasing wealth were not only trial workers or school teachers is parison may be drawn between the dained by God.

Now, for the first time in almost 400 years of toll, misery and success, these peoples are told that economic growth is near its end, that the further pursuit of unlimited wealth and higher living stanits physical ruin. Such is the warning of the scientists clustered around the computers in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Within a single lifetime, minor planet, as he is going now. Thus-the era opened at Jamestown and Quebec, a mere moment in human experience, already is closing.

the old ones are exhausted; that the pollution caused by the manufacture of these things can somehow be cured. Yet at the same time Mr. Trudeau's government was preparing a massive white paper on foreign policy and it designated economic growth as one of the nation's supreme priorities.

The Goal of Growth

The contradiction between the prime minister's private and public thoughts need not concern us at the moment when we are in an election year and economic growth is the grand desideratum and Holy Grail of all political parties, the sure answer to everything; more than that, the personal goal of almost every

Nevertheless, the prime minister's moral hunch at Vancouver, if you can call it that, embraces many practical considerations, too complex for full dis-

Among them is the future management of Canada's natural-wealth when our American neighbors, with increasing population and increasing consumption per capita, will want every pound of raw material they can get from us.

A second question (ignored in a political campaign of competing promises) is how we shall pay, in taxes, or prices, or both, the huge cost of preserving our environment, if it can be preserved. / A third and possibly the most important of all questions is how much individual freedom can be preserved in an era of expanding government encouraged, if not compelled, by the expanding physical dilemma.

Around these questions and others of similar magnitude the world's debate must soon focus. While they will be muted in Canada during an election year, the central and permanent issues of our time, as newly discovered and distinguished from the peripheral and ephe-meral, cannot be evaded much longer. For even if the computers of Cambridge are wrong by half a century or so, man now faces the final challenge to all his accepted lifeways. His business will go on, but not as usual.

Up the Golden Stairs

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation has published a graph reprinted by the B.C. School Trustees' Association from an earlier federal publication purporting to show that "teachers' pay increases are in line with B.C. averages."

Starting from a base of 100 in 1961, the graph traces the increases in B.C. industrial wages for the next 10 years, with the teachers gaining no increase in the first 'year and apparently one step behind. The point is made that teachers have followed, not led the upward surge in wages.

No one need seriously challenge the graph, or the parallel staircases which indicate the rate of increase for industrial workers and those in the classroom.

Yet there is one significant omission from the graph. While both categories start from the base of 100 in 1961, industrial workers climbing to 170 in 1971, with teachers following at about 165, no indication is given of any difference in the starting point. Both are computed on a base of 100.

A Man for All Seasons

An idea has been circulating in the Department of Justice in Ottawa that might still become reality, despite the distractions of electiontime politics and cabinet shuffles. The plan is to create what one newspaper described as "a sort of public service version of Perry Mason," a Public Interest Counsel. This representative of the public good would show up, whether by invitation or not, at court hearings, commission hearings and such, whenever he thought the public interest was at stake.

One Justice Department official disclosed the rationale of the Counsel when he said: "Every regulatory agency tends, after a while, to reflect the interest of the industry it's supposed to regulate. This (Public Interest Counsel) would help to counteract that ten-

As an addition to the public armory, the Counsel would have some resemblance to the ombudsman who is empowered to cut through bureaucratic red tape to obtain justice for the individual. The Public Interest Counsel, however, would act in a wider sphere and could give a measure of protection to citizens generally.

postulates on which man's civilization, and especially the affluent society of North America, are built. It makes nonsense of our economic folklore, our political theories, our social aspirations and our quarrelling ideologists. It also raises profound moral questions for those people who conquered and exploited North America for gain in the name of a Christian religion founded on the doctrine of poverty in this world and superior riches

The moral questions, while they are always decisive for any society in the end, must be left there to the moralists. What of the practical questions? If it be true, indeed, that we can no longer count on perpetual economic growth and that the apex of our living standard is not far ahead, where does that leave us?

Obviously it leaves us with a new set of problems that our best economists did not foresee, that our statesmen had never grasped that our social reformers cannot imagine. For some time, however, these practical men will deny that the new problems are real.

ART STOTT

Can the Culture Survive?

ment Minister Jean Chretien says:

"Indians want to remain Indians. Estudes to life and, if accepted as they are, can contribute to our society." He states that Canada draws strength from the differences and diversities of its people and adds that "we want to safeguard those diversities. But at the same time we must pierce language barriers and nourish cultural aspirations deeply rooted in the past."

cannot expound his total philosophy on Indians and Eskimos as well as their potential contribution to Canada. But the generalities he has presented invite two serious questions: Can the "cultural aspirations deeply rooted in the past" survive in the modern world in other than art forms? And is it possible to preserve their different attitude to life under the pressure of homogenization imposed by technology and its expansion into areas once almost the sole preserve of Indians and Eskimos?

Old Ways Gone

We have been told that the old way of life based on hunting and trapping can no longer sustain the native populations. The resources are dwindling and too many people are now in the formerly isolated regions. We are assured, also, that to compete, meaning to survive in the Canada of today, the native peoples In the northland, according to recent reports, every effort is being made to very young Indian and Eskimo children in their own tongues. But this changes as the little ones emerge from the primary grades, when the language of instruction usually becomes English

The British Columbia project should preserve some of the culture of the Indians. It can scarcely be expected to provide a working language which will enable the native peoples to compete suc cessfully with other Canadians.

Perhaps one of the most theoretically appealing aspects of Indian culture the Indian way of life stemming from distant forebears - is represented in the kinship concept. This is an idealistic code which calls upon the more fortunate to help the less fortunate - the man with food shares it with his hungry brothers, the man with shelter brings the homeless under his roof. Practised under ideal conditions by ideal people, this is a saint-thirfty and hard-working kin. The result, Fund, Indians are being taught by white say some authorities, is negative, though debate continues over the possibility that the negative characteristic is a result of poverty more than the cause of it.

At any event, the record shows that industrious Indians, workers and conscientious heads of famidemands of kinship that they finish a year of steady work worse off economically than others who have subsisted on welfare. The ideal shines. In practice it can spell out personal disaster

No Hope of Ideal

The hard, cold fact is that no society achieves the ideal, simply because it is composed of fallible humans. And shining ideals fail under various circum stances. Tennyson phrased it succinctly-The old order changeth, yielding place to new f... lest one good custom should corrupt the world.'

So the culture and different attitudes to life are transformed by the conditions which prevail now. The Indian may want to remain Indian. The Eskimo may want to remain Eskimo. Neither, though, can remain exactly what their forefathers were. Conditions are different, pressures are different. And men of goodwill want both Indians and Eskimos to have share in the so-called good life which is closed to them when they lack the education to participate. That education tends to displace the old cultures and attitudes

Hopefully the Indian and the Eskimo will preserve some elements of their culturns at least in art forms - story, song, dance, picture, sculpture, carving and certain philosophies. They cannot, however, dance back the buffalo, to use an American idiom. Though, if Farley Mowat is correct in his assessment of Northern Siberians' ability to maintain their identity while moving into the stream of the final quarter of the 20th century, there may be a chance for them present Canadian trends promise.

Every legislative session has its moments of high political drama, and this one has been no exception.

But the over-riding impression which emerges after eight weeks of debate is that nobody in the house really cares what's going on.

The government doesn't need to care what's going on, as long as it isn't too embarrassing. And in Premier Bennett's concept of politics as war, the legislature is simply a battlefield where the helpless losers of the opposition have no choice but to impale themselves on the government majority.

Drug 'Education' at Fault?

I'm starting to wonder which is worse — the use of drugs by young peo-ple, or the public uproar about it. The subjects become an obsession, a na-tion-wide neurosis, both with the young who do drugs and with the old who want to stop them — for example, the big play given by newspapers to the demise of Junkie June Dickinson, the Vancouver girl who died at 16 after long

As the talk turned to drugs, I remarked that if I ad a kid on speed or heroin I wouldn't make the slightest effort to stop or to save him.

Mother X was horrified — "You don't mean that!" I said, "Oh yes, I do. Now tell me, just how can you stop a kid from taking drugs if he wants to?", and looked around the table. Well, sir, I don't care about what you call the drug problem. I don't care about "solving" it, and I don't care about the thousands of kids under 16 who as you say are hopelessly addicted. Other people may care, other people may actually do something about it, but that's up to them; you may, as Sam Goldwyn said, include me out. Joan Scapillato writes from Port Colborne;

'I agree with you that if an adult wishes to adopt a lifestyle which jeopardizes his lifespan, who cares? If an adult chooses to become a part of the drug scene and, in the process, pads the pockets of the pushers, let him suffer the consequences. But what about the lives of the children who have been sucked into the cesspoof of drug abuse? sucked into the cesspool of drug abuse? As parents, we discipline these children until they have matured enough to discipline themselves. We make most of the major decisions for them. We decide what food they will eat, what clothes they will wear, how much sleep they need, how much education and cultural enrichment are necessary to become a well-adjusted adult. But when it comes to drugs, it seems that the children was to describe the drugs it seems that the children was the drugs was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was that the children was the drugs was th come to drugs, it seems that the children must suddenly adopt the wisdom of a 16-year-old, and often at as young as 10 years of age, and decide which route they will follow."

Well, Mrs. S., I hate to say this but I must. Drugs have become so commonplace among the young that you've no way of protecting your kids from them, you've no way to prevent your kids from taking them — unless of course you kept them home and sat, on their heads 24 hours a day. The choice to use or not to use drugs is one entirely within their hands — not those of the police, not those of the teachers, not those of the parents, but their own. And if you say, "Kids shouldn't be making such a decision," I can only reply that such a decision," I can only reply that they already are.

"Do you know what you're doing?" So run the advertisements. It's my view that a lot of the kids who use drugs know just what they're doing; they know more about drugs than their parents, more than their teachers. Any time I discuss the subject in this column, I get letters from students telling me. In tones of great authority and often anger, that I'm wrong—that Drug A is addictive and Drug B is not; that Drug C does no damage to the body whereas Drug D does.

They know what they're doing—or body whereas Drug D does.

They know what they're doing or they think they know what they're doing. Perhaps this is the consequence of so-called drug education; the kids feel it gives them expert knowledge on the subject. Perhaps also it's a consequence of all the public furor over drugs. As Dr. Seymour Halleck, the University of Wisconsin psychlatrist, says in the current issue of Addictions:

* * * "We must consider the possibility that repeated exposure to any subject may markedly alter our attitudes to-ward that subject. As illegal drugs are ward that subject. As megal drugs are endlessly discussed and rediscussed they become more familiar and perhaps more acceptable to us. It is concelyable that the plethora of publicity about of the publicity and usage, and the abundance of educational meetings held, simply neutralize the negative feelings with which adults youth who are prone to experiment and take risks anyway."

The Columbia project as of Dec. 31, 1971. has used up $32 million in excess of the $458 million credited to B.C. under he 1984 Columbia River Creaty with the U.S.

The extra $32 million came from the dash flow or operat-ing revenue of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, Bennett reported in answers to ques-tions from Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

The answers were filed late Friday afternoon, less than 24 hours after Resources Minister-Ray Williston had told the opposition the government had made a mistake in estimating Columbia power costs because of inflation and other unexpected cost increases.

The information showed that the costs of completing the three Columbia storage dams — exclusive of machinery which wasn't covered by the treaty — may exceed the money brought in under the treaty by about $111 million by 1373 completion date of the storage dams.

The sstimated cost in 1963 used by the government was $447 million which at the time Benaett said would yield a $53 million surplus on the treaty.

That estimate was based on an anticipated total revenue of about $500 million under the treaty, but that figure wasn't attained because the

WAC Hints at Hydro Rate Hike for Industry

Premier Bennett hinted strongly Friday that hydro rates for industrial users will be increased this year.

Bennett promised the legis-lature there would be no in-creases in hydro bills to resi-

But he said Nelson had been using the 28 acres of land involved in the bill as "leverage" in negotiations over the canal project.

The expropriation power for the province was needed because Hydro hasn't the authority under its own act to expropriate a utility. The land was previously ruled utility proper-

Gripes on Grapes

Provincial wineries are buy-ing too many low-quality American grapes, the legisla-ture's agriculture committee was told Friday.

The B.C. grape marketing board said the liquor control board should use its licensing powers to put wineries on a program which would direct them eventually to using noth-ing but B.C. grapes.

The board said there is an insufficient supply today, but "withing five years at least 75-per cent of each winery's requirement can be met from local supplies."

The board said the proportion of provincially-grown grapes in B.C. wines has dropped from two-thirds to one-third because of purchases of low-quality U.S. grapes.

8 terrifying questions to ask a small-car salesman.

How much?

Brace yourself. It may cost you several hundred dollars more than you think.

Because on top of the inevitable sales taxes and delivery charges, wait the inevitable optional charges.

That's where you can really throw your money around.

On an electric telescoping antenna, peeka-boo headlights, or a sports console.

Even more bizarre is the new small car that offers optional power equipment.

A small car is supposed to be easy to So what's it doing with power steering and power brakes? Instead of all that mechanical power, you'll need a little will power.

To keep from being fast-talked into a lot of things you don't need.

Is it a small car? Or a big car made small? You may unwittingly buy a small car that's really a big car. With a shortened wheelbase. A snazzy restyled body.

And a lot of practical problems nobody bothered to work out. You may also buy a small car suffering from an identity crisis. It may not know what it is.

Because its engine may have been lifted from another car. Its transmission borrowed from vet another.

Why not look for a small car with just one goal in life:

To be a small car.

Do you?

What improvements were made this year?

If a car maker's serious about making his car better each year, he'll make it better each year.

With improvements that are meaningful. And not just cosmetic.

Lots of flashy sheetmetal and fancy chrome won't make a car run better. Or last longer. But a more efficient engine and smoother suspension system will. Of course, if the car's a first edition, it won't have any improvements. In which case you should do some soul searching before you buy it. Because it takes a car maker years of improving and relining to work the bugs out

You don't really want a car to work its bugs out on you.

How long does it take to replace a fender? Depends on which small cor you buy. Buy one that changes its looks every year and it will probably take longer to repair the

Because dealers can't stock all the parts of cars that get an annual face-lift.

It may also take longer for mechanics to service a car that's changed frequently. Because a mechanic will have to relearn the inner parts. Frequently.

The easiest way to reduce the possibility of such fustrations is to buy a small car that's sensibly designed to begin with.

And never changed for the sake of change.

Can I talk with the Service Manager? Hardly anyone ever asks this one. But why not?

You should know how good for bad! the dealer's service is.

Before you buy the car.

You might save yourself a lot of grief, And

So ask him what kind of service schedule he has for your car.

What kind of diagnostic service?

What does it cost? Some dealers have an elaborate array of electronic diagnostic equipment. Which can spot little problems before they become big problems. So when you buy a new car, don't let the showroom in front dazzle you.

Better you be impressed by the showroom in back:

The service department.

How long is the warranty? One of the best questions you can e ask

You see, how long a car manufacturer's willing to repair or replace major parts at his expense tells you something about him: .

How good he thinks his car is. If he feels it's sturdy and dependable, he'll give you a generous warranty.

Something better than the usual 12,000 miles/12 months, whichever comes first. But if he doesn't give you better than that for even that, ask another question:

"Why?" Can I take it for a test drive? Curiously, a lot of people never test drive a new small car before they buy it.

But obviously, you should. To make sure you like the way it performs. If you decide to buy the car, check it out meticulously when it's delivered. If you find anything wrong, tell the salesman. And have it fixed. After all, it's one thing to spend hundreds of dollars on a new small car.

But it's another thing to spend hundreds of dollars on a new small lemon.

What can I sell it for? Asking what you can get for it beloce you get it may seem like a dumb

But the resale value of a car is a tip-off on what people think about it.

If the car's been a loser over the years, with heavy repair bills, you'll probably take a beating when you unload it: If the car depreciates drastically the minute you buy it, you're losing money even before you drive it home.

And if it has no resale value yet because it's brand new, who knows what you'll get for it when you sell it.

So while you're thinking about buy ng low, think about something else: Selling high. Good luck

At the outset we must obey the rules. Once we have mastered those rules we can modify, break, or discard, as suits our purpose.

So don't be discarded.

So don't be discouraged when told this or that is un-necessary. After a little experience and some success you

A contributing factor to most failures is poor grade seed. This is not a reflection on the seed producer because on the seed producer because all seed must be graded ac-cording to regulations set out in the Canada Seed Act.

Grade one, or top-screen seed, may cost you one dollar for 100 seeds, and you will get 100 strong seedlings. Grade two may cost 50 cents, and grade three only 30 cents, but each will contain a lower proportion of viable seeds.

So our first rule is to buy top grade seed.

All seeds do not germinate

All seeds do not germinate within the same period of time. Parsley and parsnips take weeks, while radish sprout in a few hours.

since success with seed sown indoors depends on exposure to light and air as soon as white sprouts can be seen, we run into trouble if our seed box has more than one kind of seeds or mixed colors.

These facts give us rule two: Use small containers for sowing seed indoors: limit each container to one kind of seed and, if possible, buy seeds of separate colors, sowing each in a separate con-tainer.

The seed box chosen in the illustration is six inches wide, eight inches long, and two inches deep, made from scrap wood. The bottom is two pieces of wood, with a quarier-inch space between for drainage, nailed to the end pieces but not to the sides.

Some plants do not like acid soil, and most seedlings resent acid conditions excepting.

This height of soil is most important. If the surface is lower, seedlings will be weak and spindly while reaching for edge of 12-inch rule, or similar to signify the soil is most.

Another secret of success with indoor sowings is the spacing of seed. Even experienced gardeners find this difficult. Folding the flap of the seed packet to form a spout and holding it as shown at D seems easiest for most people. A tap with the first finger causes each seed to drop separately if you watch closely. If a few seeds drop in a group you can spread them with a seed label or a pair of tweezers.

About Kapp, Stamps, Rumors and Cougars . . .

One week's work, or as Joe Kapp said: "I haven't been paid one penny by the Patriots since I left Boston in 1970, and there is nothing I can say or do," in regard to his football career.

Joe, it will be recalled, has a snit going with the Patriots and National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle over what type of a contract he should sign. The pay he isn't collecting, runs at sbout $133,000 a year. Joe won't sign a regular NFL contract, and his lawyer has taken it from there. Meanwhile, Joe is making movies, and making "good money" doing coming to camp this summer," I will be pleased, "be said. What he meant was two starters. Hopefully, an excellent back and a tough lineman. Otherwise the Stamps are set, or as set.

Calgary last year, the Stamps drew 98 per cent of capacity for the year, and yet had to reach into the equalization pool before realizing a $40,000 profit. Now, as champs, the players will want more. And as one means of circumventing the problem the Stamps, as have the Lions and other football clubs across the country, will raise ticket prices by 30 cents. They'll also add 2,000 seats to McMahon Stadium, increasing

Speaking of football, protective headgear for football players is in the news again. Among the more grim findings in a recent report of the U.S. National Commission of Product Safety is that football players in the U.S. annually suffer 250,000 to 500,000 brain concussions during play. The recommendation is that prescribed standards for headgear should be adopted, and enforced. Another recommendation was that coaches and game officials enforce the rules prohibiting "spearing". This is the vicious technique of driving one's head into the chest, stomach or kidney areas of an opponent. Both are excellent points. What they're sayifig:

In the rumor department is the news that John Ferguson has already signed to play with the Toronto team in the World Hockey Association, and that Bobby Hull has signed for $1 million and the Winnipeg Jets . . . that Muhammad All has given no indication when he will sign for a Vancouver bout with George Chuvalo, or if he ever will . . that the B.C. Jockey Club will compromise and increase its total of racing days at Exhibition Park from the cutback total of 71 announced earlier . . Last year there were 108 days . . , the reason is simple enough, the government has given in and will take five per cent less from racing this year. In return, racing will oblige and operate more days. A 30 per cent reduction in days, as originally announced, would mean a loss of about $1 million to the really believed that they would accomplish the impossible, and provincial treasury.

The Cougars wind it up at home tonight, and if nobody ever get into the playoffs, at least a good start has been made for next year. When former coach Fred Hucul left the club a few next year. When former coach Fred Hucul left the club a few weeks ago, he said he felt he had done his job, and provided a nucleus for the future. Since then the Cougars have made Hucul, and his successor, Mitch Pechet, look very good indeed. They proved they have come a long way when they traded 2-1 decisions here with league-leading Calgary Centennials, and although they never did get to knock off New Westminster, they were close enough in two one-goal losses to be considered as having a promising future. Besides, Pechet has done a good job, and he should be pleased at the confidence the players showed in him after Hucul's departure.

It makes sense to suggest that it would be nice to have him back.

Shore Control Wanted

Saanich took the first step Friday in formally announc-ing its intention to acquire some underwater real estate.

Following Oak Bay's example, the minicipality is applying to the municipal affairs department for a change in its letters patent to enable municipal boundaries to be extended into the sea.

Newspaper advertisements this weekend state that the extension sought is "all that foreshore and land covered by water" lying between high water mark and a line drawn 1,000 feet offshore.

Some 13½ miles of Saanich coastline is involved.

The announcement says that if at least 10 per cent of owner-electors in Sanich (which would be about 3.000 property owners) petition council, the question of the boundary extension will be put to a vote.

Mayor Hugh Curtis has said that the extension would enable Saanich to control activities on beaches and on coastline below high water mark. Council has been told that extra costs may be involved in beach cleaning and polic-ing, the latter possibly including a special patrol and rescue boat.

CAUT Backs Appeal

The Canadian Association of University Teachers is supporting Dr. William Goede and J. P. Graff in their appeal to Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson over their dismissals last year by the University of Victoria.

Goede and Graff had both applied for tenure at IIVic before the 1970-71 academic year. They had been recommended for tenure by various departmental and faculty committees but had had the recommendations overturned by then president Bruce Partridge.

caure censured Partridge for his action and the two professors' cases, along with that of Dr. Tikam Jain, whose case was similar, were con-sidered by a three-man advi-sory aboard last summer. The advisory board recom-mended no action on the cases.

Goede and Graff appealed to Nicholson in his capacity as visitor of the university, but Nicholson has taken no action on the matter. TOO CRITICAL?

In a statement Friday, CAUT said it "believes that Dr. Goede and Graff were dismissed by president Partridge and the board of governors without proper procedures and without establishing that the reasons for their actions were academic in nature."

"The question remains unanswered as to whether the actions of president Partridge and the board were based on genuine academic considerations, or on a wrongful deci-ations, or on a wrongful deci-sion to remove faculty critical of the university or of some of its academic and administra-tive policies," the CAUT statement said.

CAUT said it is giving its "full support to Dr. Goede and Mr. Graff in their appeals for a fair hearing to the visi-tor of the university."

The Goede-Graff-Jain affair raised considerable con-troversy among students and faculty at UVic last year. Partridge, who resigned Jan-uary 31, is still under censure by CAUT.

457 Donate Their Blood

One hundred and twenty-eight blood donors turned out for a clinic at Mount Douglas senior secondary school

Thursday.

A clinic at Esquimalt senior secondary Wednesday drew 85

donors.
A total of 457 donors con-tributed to four days of clinics this week, including clinics Monday and Tuesday at Red Cross House.

Open Space is filled. Artists released work from their stu-lios, amateurs emptied their nobby rooms, and dilettantes imped art from cardboard hoxes hidden in furnace rooms. Delivered to Open Space, their work presents a spectrum of community art.

Eugene Miller is the or-ganizer of the Open Eye Exhibition which opened Thursday. His soft-spoken enthusiasm attracted hundreds of volunteer workers and partici-coming to Victoria a year ago from New York City, Miller brought a concept of the street. There is a tradition of community happenings in New York where residents and artists organize against ghetio apathy and blight. The street-becomes a peoples theatre, an equalizer where private property and social mechan-ics are forgotten, Creativity leads toward dignity.

Miller's concept of art as a community activity opposes the Nietzschean aristocratic ideal of the artist tyrant.

You do not actually READ this book.

You LISTEN to it.
You listen to Charles de Gaulle, the head of state who believed in France almost as much as be believed in himself; and his faith in both was very, very great.
De Gaulle did great things. He strode magnificently through partisan barbedwire entanglements as thick as Yet, for all his aloof bearing, he had a sense of tim-

And then, wisely or not, he began to write a book! In fact he intended his book should comprise three volumes. Here we have the first volume and a little of the second. Then he made his last grand, and final, exit - det

De Gaulle's great re-entry into the political life of France came in 1958 when he managed to persuade a country torn with political strife, its economy shattered, its empire dissolving, that the only remedy was a Strong Hand. And he was the Strong Hand.

De Gaulle, as he reveals himself in this unfinished autobiography, never regarded himself as a dictator. He was the Head of State and as such he managed to instil was the Head of State and as such he managed to histidiscipline in his cabinet and, to an extent, in the country. No dictator was he, but he was boss.

From his own story one may judge that the most daring — yes, the most courageous act of de Gaulle's life, was his decision about Algeria, Algeria, most important of France's overseas possessions, was dominated by a determined minority of first and second generation French born in that colony. This powerful minority, backed by French battallons, aircraft and ships was carrying on a disastrous war against independence — and achieving nothing but more trouble.

This situation was clear to de Gaulle and his cabinet.

After long negotiation and study the head of State acted like a surgeon watching for the ripe and proper time to lance a boil. He lanced. He was met with a revolt of the generals in Algeria, with defiance from some of the military elite dear to his military heart.

But he persisted, pressing forward along a predetermined line. It was costly in francs and unity; but he won out. He was armed with dictatorial power and the admiration and devotion of thousands of French soldiers who held him as their symbol of ultimate victory in a humi-

Pilating war.

One cannot help but wonder if the frittering away of France's overseas empire kindled a gleam in de Gaulle's eye for Quebec.

The scope of this unfinished book includes only his first visit to Canada in the days of Diefenbaker. The more direct effort to encourage the dismemberment of Canada was, no doubt, to have been written later. His claim was that Quebec, the foothold France held in America, was lost only because Mother France was preoccupied with more pressing events in Europe.

One present that de Caulle of the country was preoccupied with more pressing events in Europe.

One regrets that de Gaulle, so far as we know, never got farther west than Toronto. A view of the Shield, the vast wheat fields of the Prairies, the oil derricks of Alaberta, the Rockies that cut even a Head of State down to size, might have broadened his view.

"Another Time, Another Place, Another Me" goes to the depression again, with a slight incident from hobo life, which stays in the memory because of its claustrophotic, setting in a railyard sand-house. The title story of the collection illustrates both Garner's strength and weakness. Viola-tion of the Virgins describes a teachers. One gratefully loses her virginity on the aptly named feast-day, while her companion, now revealed as an alcoholic, stays with her bottle in the hotel.

The Mexican scenery is vi-vidly described and so are the responses of the two tourists to it; the physical discomfort of car travel in the heat and the strangeness of the new en vironment are powerfully evoked, The festival and the seductive Mexican suggest a situation worthy of D. H.

Lawrence and in the comparison I fear that Garner suffers badly, not so much in the evocation of atmosphere, which he does extremely well, but in his description of sex.

For this, in other stories also, he uses such quaint coy terminology that one longs for a few brisk four-letter words. I don't believe that anyone, even a Canadian schoolmarm, mentally uses in bed Garner's habitual word, "tumescence."

The Pioneers: When Life Was Good

By JAMES McCOOK

In the gloom of the long winter of 1870-71 the school teacher at Yale wrote in her diary "How narrow-minded these people are!" without further explanation.

Miss Susan Abercrombie Nagle herself was not exactly tolerant of frontier amusements. On Feb. 1 Mrs. Pope invited her for the evening and they "had some music, (and) they played whist. They would have had poker, a game they are very fond of, but that I objected to play for money."

This attitude was very suitable for the lady of 30 years being courted by the Anglican clergyman, Rev. David Holmes, who won her esteem for unexpected reasons. For example, on a foul Sunday in January, with heavy snow, Holmes did not ring the church bell at all and Susan Nagle wrote in her diary that for this "we voted him very sensible."

A couple of days later the stage arrived or rather horses arrived, the coach being abandoned on the road and the passengers forced to flounder through the snow. It was arranged that they should continue by canoe on the Fraser River in the morning. That night it was 12

When letters came telling of friends and relatives with opportunity to attend parties and bails in other parts of the world, Miss Nagle wrote primity, "I hope I am not envious, I have the consolation of knowing I have only

She had made clear, she wrote, that she would never love anyone again but amid the February snows she confessed she thought she was beginning to "like" Mr. Holmes. "Well, I've gone and done it — whether for good or bad, I am engaged to Mr. Holmes. I can't quite realize that I have really said the word, have I done right?"

It took another month before "Mr. Holmes" became "David" in the diary.

On April 10 she said goodbye to Yale for the season and, after rough crossing, was with her family in Victoria on April 12. On June 7, 1871, Mr. Holmes arrived from Yale and on June 19 they were married by Dean Edward Cridge at St. John's church; "It was a very quiet wedding." she wrote.

On June 25 they were back in Yale and she played the harmonium in church, taught Sunday school, served tea to visitors including a bishop, conducted singing classes, worried about ber husband going to Hope by canoe in bad weather, and failed to improve her spelling. On New Year's Eve she confided that in the year before, in 1870, "how little I then thought my home this year would be the Yale Parsonage!"

In August, 1874, Mrs. Holmes was writing in another Parsonage, at Cowichan, and she had a son 21 months old. She still had indifferent health and her husband, who travelled to Salt Spring Island and other communities to preach, cheerfully did the washing and other household tasks when help was thavailable.

In 1875 Mrs. Holmes was assuring her diary that "I do intend trying hand to overcome this habit of lying in bed in the mornings."

David established churches at Somenos, Westholme

Mrs. Holmes lived to be 80 years old, until Jan. 24, 1921. At family Christmas reunions she recalled Monday, Dec. 25, 1871, as she and her husband spent it at Yale

You look at Chevelle... it says style. You price Chevelle... itsays value. You look into Chevelle... it says dependability.

First things first, so let's take a closer look at Chevelle's style. -

In particular, the style of the Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe. This is a very sporty-looking machine. Featuring an easy-wheeling 112" wheelbase and a sweeping, low-profile silhouette.

And notice the full-door glass. Another sporty touch.

Now, how about Chevelle value. value isn't just a question of how much car you get for your dollar (in Malibu's case it's a heck of a lot), but how well the value holds up. What happens at trade-in time?

All Chevelles have a gratifyingly high resale value simply because they've proved themselves over the years. Because they held up over the years. And here's why.

Chevelle dependability is the sum of many different things. Features like inner fenders to protect the outer fenders; flush-and-dry rocker panels; side-guard door beams; a steel cargoguard barricade between the trunk and the rear seat.

The proof of that dependability is all tied up with Chevelle's good value generally, and high resale value in particular. And remember, you don't become one of Canada's most popular mid-size cars without establishing dependability and continuing to prove it.

Chevelle Malibu. Style. Value. Dependability. It all adds up to one very good deal.

To find out just how good a deal, see your Chevrolet dealer, today.

SOUND SCENE

This Music Hath Scented Charm

By RON ROBINSON CJVI Program Director

You may remember the novelty of "scented movies" about 10 or 12 years ago. This was at a time when movie makers were trying all sorts of gimmicks, like extra wide screens and multi-source sound. At the appropriate spots during the picture a certain scent would be allowed to escape into the theatre to coincide with a spe-allowed to escape into the theatre to coincide with a specific scene or two.

Now the record industry is trying "fragrant music". The occasion is the British release of Melanie's "Garden in the City" this week. Polydor records have enclosed it in a sleeve depicting a garden scene set against the background of New York City, and the jacket is impregnated with the fragrance of flowers. Polydor officials say the fragrance is actually perfumed oil, but at present there are no plans for a North American release of the "scented sounds."

The man for whom the JUNO Canadian music awards were named was in Victoria last week, eloquently defending the Canadian content broadcast requirements and challenging broadcasters to help solve the unique problems of Canadian identity and unity. CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau is happy with the progress the Canadian music industry has achieved in the past year.

He quoted one major chain of record stores in Ontario which reported Canadian artists record sales increasing from 3 per cent in 1970 to 15 per cent in 1971. In Toronto one major station's Top 30 had 9 Canadian hits thereon . . . or exactly 30 per cent, the CRTC minimum requirement for AM radio. Meantime, RPM's JUNO awards for 1971 continued to go to such well-known names as Anne Murray, Gordon Lightfoot, Ginette Reno and the Stampeders . . . .

The key radio station for Canadian record producers is CKLW. Wind or Detroit. Because it is a highly regarded "local" station in the U.S. city, and because it must play 30 per cent Canadian by CRTC rule, a Canadian record that gets "picked" by the station, is virtually guaranteed a shot at release in the "States."

Thus it is interesting that CKLW has dropped the Poppy Family's latest single "Good Friends" due to "lack of stock" in the record stores! Could mean the U.S. L. "d n label is not interested in the Canadian group (who play Victoria April 1), and it also could mean Terry Jacks will be looking for another label connection after more than five years with London.

'Mrs. Mayor' Plans to Work

LONDON, Ont. (CP) Seven years ago, when her youngest child toddled off to kindergarten. Jane Bigelow made a determined effort to break out of the boredom of the suburban housewife by pluncing into politics. plunging into politics.

When Mr. Gosnell resigned last March 6, Mrs. Bigelow was thrown into the spotlight as the favored contender be-cause of her knowledge of council and what other con-trollers saw as her sometimes motherly approach to settling differences between councilmembers.

as mayor?
"It's hard to determine,"
she said in an interview
Thursday. "The future depends on how much co-operation council gives in letting

REVISITED

'We will have a very worthwhile . somewhat unique building (Peter Pollen said that!)

City officials expressed cautious optimism today following recent discussions with Reid Properties Ltd. architects on the proposed Reid development for the Inner Harbor.

Both Mayor Peter Pollen and planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young said that although plans are not yet at the definite stage, the city is pleased with the conceptual ideas the Reid planners have come up with.

"If the details can be worked out and our standards adhered to, we will have a very worthwhile and somewhat unique building." Pollen said.

He said the Reid proposal was received with "Cautious enthusiasm" by members of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission and city aldermen at a meeting with Reid's architects Thursday night.

Pollen said the city agreed to participate financially in construction of a model of the proposal which would extend from the waterfront to Government Street and include the former Ocean Cement property, now owned by the city, towards the Empress Hotel.

The architect's cost of the model would be about $1,800, of which the city would likely pay about $600, he said.

Young said the proposal made by the Reid people Thursday night was a "very superficial overview" of the development, which was basically an embodiment of the city's proposed building standards and Reid's ideas for the concept of the project.

Young said the concept involves two towers set reasonably far apart and consisting of eight and 12 storeys, or eight and 13, or some similar combination.

The buildings height definitely will not exceed 14 storeys, he said, since that is the height limit contained in city council's proposed bylaw amendments for building standards in the downtown area. The amendments will be discussed at a public hearing Thursday night.

The concept will likely resemble Toronto's city hall project, Young said, in that the towers may be curved in towards each other, facing on a central plaza. The towers would be far enough apart to leave a good view from Bastion Square of

Young said the Reid proposal is by no means firmed up either by the city or by Reid himself:

The progress made at the Thursday night meeting was that the architect has now been pointed in the right direction, he said, and can proceed with more detailed plans for the development.

The city will want to take a closer look at whatever model is built and detailed working drawings before any final decisions are made, he said.

Cemeteries Come Up Short On Trust Fund Deposits

companies including Hatley Memorial Gardens at Colwood fell short by $132,000 in mak-ing trust fund deposits re-quired by law in the 1959 to 1970 period.

Answers filed in the legisla-ture Friday showed $304,000 should have been deposited but only $152,000 actually was...

The companies in question were placed under trusteeship by the Public Utilities Commission in April, 1970 and still remain under government

They are Colwood Improvement Company Ltd. which operates Hatley Memorial Gardens on the Sook Road; Cedar Valley Memorial Gardens Ltd., which has ceme-teires at Port Alberni and Cedar Valley near Nanaimo; and Greencrest Mem Gardens Ltd. of Kelowna.

The companies are operated by Robert Hagel of Victoria. The answers were filed by

Premier Bennett in regionse to questions from Allin Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound.) DEPOSIT REQUIRED

They show the Colwood Cemetery operation had total in the 11-year period; Cedar Valley, $247,000 and Green-crest, $167,000. as "current." This wasn't explained any further.

There was a total of 8,128 plots sold including 4,616 at Colwood for a gross revenue of $779,000 from that source.

Under the Cemeteries Act which took effect in 1958 cem-eteries are required to deposit a portion of plot sales into perpetual funds for upkeep of the cemeteries.

The answer stated that an audit for the 1958 to 1967 period showed the $152,000 difference between the amount required and the amount deposited was "offset" by re-invested income of $88,000 resulting in a liability of $64,000

But Cemeteries Act regulafur Cemeteries act regula-tions originally applying to the cemeteries specified that income must be re-invested into the funds in any case until they reach mandatory levels at which time funds could be used for upkeep.

In addition, the PUC grant-ed the cemeteries waivers of ed the cemeteries waivers of about 80 per cent of their care fund deposits in the last couple of years to assist the struggling firms.

The answers state that costs of the trusteeship have to-talled $21,000 for an adminis-trator's salary since April 1970 and are a charge against 1970 and are a charge against bined perpetual care funds as of Dec. 31, 1971 was $346,000, Bonnett's answer stated. But no figures for sales and trust fund deposits for 1971 were available. When the trusteeship action taken, the companies were de-scribed as having been close to bankruptcy when taken the legislature shows sales of plots declined badly over the 11-year period. At Colwood, for instance, sales totalled $182,442 in 1959 and $44,000 in 1970.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mollie C. Freedman calls hand-writing what she thinks it is — "brain-writing."

applying for jobs or being considered for promotion within corporations nationwide.

She also teaches hand-writing analysis and lectures on the line points of the science.

Miss Freedman, a graduate of the Chicago Institute of Applied Science, said corporations she does work for include life insurance companies and public utilities. She gets batches of samples of hand-writing—from one to three pages per brain-writer.

"I never meet the people involved," she said in an interview. "And I believe my reports are just one factor considered in saying 'Yes, hire' or 'Yes, promote' — or the opposite.

Her services for hire include anlyzing the handwriting of engaged couples. The analysis usually is the gift from one set of parents or some relative.

"No one has failed to get married on account of a report showing incompatability as revealed by handwriting analysis," Miss Freedman said.

"But I believe if more persons had bandwriting analyzed before marriage it would help to give partners a better un-derstanding of one another — and a greater chance of working together for harmony."

Though Miss Freedman's fees for services vary, roughly a page of handwriting analyzed costs $50, two pages, $75 or more, and three pages, $150 or more.

Miss Freedman said her brain-writing analyses also are used in vocational guidance, child guidance, eredit evaluation, forgery and questioned documents.

Miss Freedman says:

Sexy Knees Next Aim For Lib Cosmetics

NEW YORK (UPI) - We have Women's Liberation. Now we're heading for "liberated" cosmetics.

One expert on consumer tastes and buying says that both sexes will begin to accept new varieties in the whole world of body decoration and that the cosmetics business, already, a multi-billion dollar one, will keep growing

"Liberated cosmetics" is the term used by Dr. Ernest Dichter, who is head of the Institute for Motivational Research. Inc., with headquarters at Croton-On-Hudson, N.Y.

"The field for cosmetics is as big as the female (and male) body," says Dr. Dichter. 'New parts of the body — such as the knee will be decorated and embellished.

"For example, a French company has been developing stencils to 'tatoo' any part of the body you want.

'In the future also, cosmetics will be in competition with drugs and psychiatry. We may have anti-depression perfumes . . cosmetics for introverts and extroverts . . for more specialized occasions . . . honeymoon cosmetics, perhaps.

Drop Immoral Concept

Dichter takes a look at new attitudes in the cosmetics world in his "Findings," an oc-casional newsletter from his Hudson Valley

He says the cosmetics industry has a whole new growth potential if it stops selling its multitude of products as "once a week items, as extravagant and overly romantic, slightly immoral . . . and make them an everyday necessity for coping with modern life that is really a part of nature . . ." Part of the whole change of attitude, he indicates, is woman's desire for the "na-tural" cosmetics and their use as an every-

"Many advertisers are still depicting cos-metics as if applying them was still special, earth shaking," he says.

Dichter calls on the industry to look at cosmetics the way a woman does, not as a "glamour product that will give her (the woman) the prince she is dreaming about, but as very practical everyday makeup that provides a more desirable 'front' to other people" and to herself.

Fun in Rubbing On

"It's possible," says Dichter, "that a future cosmetic may not promise more beautiful skin" — merely a lot of fun putting it on while you take your time.

"At the same time, marketers may well consider cosmetics products with a built-in, tactile, sensuous pleasure. The modern woman needs time for herself.

"We found that one product combining cleansing and creaming was making the mis-take of calling itself "instant."

"A woman wants the excuse cosmetics provide to spend time caressing herself —

School Takes New Trail For Indians

By ANN DUNSMUIR Times Staff

All children feel a bit Irightened their first day in school. It takes a few days to adjust to the big school building and crowds of intimidating older children. This first confrontation with compulsory education is twice as difficult for indian children. They must also make their way in an alien cul-an children. They must also make their way in an alien culture.

At Craigflower Elementary Indian children have a better chance than most attending school off the reserve.

This school has an enrichment program for Indian children designed to give them a sense of pride in their tace and culture and help them feel at home in white society.

One of the classes offered this term is in social awarness. Mrs. Patricia Brusegard, who teaches a similar course for older children, supervises the new class taught by parent volunteer Mrs. Jeanne Hanson.

Other classes offered include beadwork, Indian legends and culture, woodcarving, knitting and tutorial sessions taught by Indian volunteers from the reserve.

Whenever possible instruction is given by an Indian volunteer.

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

Principal Whit Durrant says Indian teachers give children a boost in morale. "They have the example of someone of their own race who has made it in the school system," Durrant said.

their own race who has made it in the school system," Durrant said.

White children take part in the program one day a week. Durrant thinks his white students should learn to appreciate the richness of Indian culture.

Mrs. Brusegard describes the awareness class as "almost an encounter session." She says students explore everything from the feel of a table to the feeling of anger.

She was surprised to find that Indian children are on the wirdle less aware of their environment than white children. "They have trouble analyzing the components of everyday sounds." Mrs. Brusegard said.

She attributes this difficulty to crowded living conditions. "The children have an enormous ability to tune out."

Teachers use records, films, picture boards and discussion groups to bein children identify and express emotions and recognize their own self-worth.

Children are asked to talk about situations in which they feel sad or happy. One little boy asked to finish the sentence. "I want to be alone when..." wrote "I want to be alone when my brother punches me."

"The children still tend to give pat answers — the opes they think I want to hear," Mrs. Brusegard said.

She explained that once the students have become "more aware of themselves" they will go on to discussions about coping with family and social situations.

she explained that once the students have become "more ware of themselves" they will go on to discussions about coping with family and social situations.

Mrs. Hanson says she is teaching the children "abstract concepts about themselves and life in general."

"Many children think Indians are the only ones who feel sad or shy," Mrs. Hanson said. "We are helping them realize that everyone feels the same.

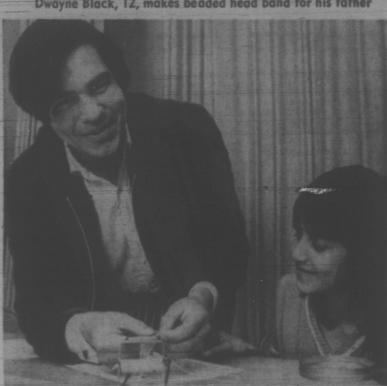

Durrant hopes his school's enrichment program won't be one of the "frills" the school board will have to cut from the budget for lack of funds. He has received a $3,000 grant forthe past three years to pay for program materials and texts.

Durrant says that "in terms of our culture Indian chil-dren are culturally deprived." He believes programs like the one in his school are a necessity not a luxury because unless Indian children feel at home in the school system they will drop out in junior high.

Jeanne Lougheed

Premier, Wife Partners

EDMONTON (CP) — "He's a nice guy, but have you ever seen his wife?"

That's the kind of remark Jeanne Lougheed doesn't want anyone to make. To ensure they don't she no longers sticks a scarf on her head "to run down to the corner store for a loaf of bread."

"I don't feel I can do that anymore," said the tall, striking blonde who is the wife of Peter Lougheed, premier of Al-

While she says she's ready to take on the responsibilities inherent in being the wife of a public figure, she also intends to retain her individuality. "When we marry and have a family, we land in a job of our own choosing. We have a responsibility to do that job well."

Well."

When you're married to a public figure such as a premier, then the responsibilities are larger, she said in an interview. For one thing, you have more of the running of a home because the home must be the kind of serene place that allows the premier to get away from business. However, she said she doesn't think a woman should give up all her own interests to look after those of her husband

"Peter married me because I was the individual I was and I feel I should retain that individuality.

When she's settled into her house here after the move from Calgary, she said she hopes to resume singing and danc-ing as well as take up-painting or take some classes at uni-

"Right.now, I'm so busy moving in that I haven't been able to plan what I'm going to do," she said while pulling faces at a photographer. He continued to snap the pictures while she leaned grimacing into the lens.

And while she likes some private life, Mrs. Lougheed also enjoys taking part in public functions.

She often goes with the premier to openings and appears on the platform with him. Progressive Conservative party organizers credit her personality with winning a lot of support during last year's election campaign.

During the campaign, in which what was called the Lougheed team upset the 36-year-old Social Credit government. Mr. Lougheed was busy touring the province. To fill the gap in his own riding, Mrs. Lougheed and her son, Steve, 16, campaigned for him.

She and Steve made the rounds, knocking on doors, handing out pamphlets and meeting the voters. She estimates she introduced herself to more than 2,000 people.

"It's fascinating when you get involved. You keep saying 'Let's do just one more block."

Steven is the oldest of the four Lougheed children. The others are Andrea, 12, Pam, 10, and Joe, 6.

A native Albertan, Jeanne Estelle Rogers was born in Forestburg, about 70 miles southeast of Edmonton, in 1929.

She went to the University of Alberta to study in the fine arts program because of her interest in music and singing. There she met Peter Lougheed and they were married the year following her graduation.

Are you beginning to think this way about funerals?

☐ I think many people buying a funeral end up paying far more than originally planned, possibly because they are emotionally bewildered at the time.

Money spent on elaborate funerals would be better spent among the living.

I want my funeral, including cremation or burial, to cost under $300.

1 think embalming, for purposes of displaying the body, is an unnecessary indignity.

i am repelled by putting a body on display with the face made up to look "natural".

I favour a closed coffin, a private cremation or burial, with perhaps a memorial service after, for

I feel strongly enough about these matters that I would like to support an organization dedicated to promoting simpler, less costly, more dignified funeral practices.

I would like to receive a simple plan which lets me record my wishes in privacy, so that they may be filed with a non-profit organization I know will carry out my wishes after death. This also saves my next-of-kin from making these difficult decisions under emotional stress.

If you feel this way you are not alone. Over 60,000 people now belong to the Memorial Society of B.C. If you move, your membership can be easily transferred to other societies throughout easily transferred to the or no cost. North America at little or no cost.

Getting High Natural Way

(Or, How I Learned to Stop Daydreaming And Pay Attention to the Teacher)

A little help from a friend

By BRIAN BUTTERS Times Staff

Sitting in a stuffy classroom half-listening to a boring lecture on the relative merits of the Canadian Constitution is not considered the ideal way to spend time by most of today's students.

The kids at John Stubbs school have a better idea. They go out and risk their neeks vaulting over 100-foot chiffs and scrambling up sheer mock faces.

part of the physical education instruction at John Stubbs, a school in Belmont Park, part of Sooke school district.

The rappelling is of the fun. There is

GOOD INSTRUCTORS

Up there, there's nothing between them and the hard-packed sand below but fresh air and seaguils . . . the kind of situation that tends to discourage daydreaming.

The instructors are nothing but the best. Master Cpl. Len Desjardins and Cpl. J. J. Thomas of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia Canadian. Light Infantry, are the men who train Canada's soldiers in mountaineering. So instruction is no problem.

The students — there were 22 of them out on the cliffs for one session this week — have earned their chance to participate by working hard at their studies throughout the school year. The program is offered to all the students in Grades 8 and 9 who take physical education courses.

nstruction at John Stubbs, a school in Belmont Park, part of Sooke school district.

But the vaulting and scrambling do actually occur, and for the uninitiated observer, it is nerve-wracking to watch.

Take your average skinny, bespectacled 14-year-old. Put him in climbing boots, heavy wool socks, a nylon parka and get him to the top of the 100-foot cliff above Fleming Beach in Esquimalt.

The rappelling is only part of the fun. There is also instruction in free climbing, strill and other climbing skills. The students, divided into there groups, listen carefully to their instructors and show considerable courage in work-onsiderable courage in work-ing their way up, down and across the faces of the cliffs. And in keeping with today's liberated society, the girls are right in there with the boys, vaulting and scrambling with a sort of "careful abandon" that makes the observer envy that makes the observer envy the advantages of a modern education.

Uh, whatever happened to volleyball?

REVISITED

'We will have a very worthwhile

. somewhat unique building'

(Peter Pollen said that!)

City officials expressed cautious optimism today follow-ing recent discussions with Reid Properties Ltd. architects on the proposed Reid development for the Inner Harbor.

Both Mayor Peter Pollen and planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young said that although plans are not yet at the definite stage, the city is pleased with the conceptual ideas the Reid planners have come up with.

'If the details can be worked out and our standards

He said the Reid proposal was received with "Cautious enthusiasm" by members of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission and city aldermen at a meeting with Reid's

Pollen said the city agreed to participate financially in construction of a model of the proposal which would extend from the waterfront to Government Street and include the former Ocean Cement property, now owned by the city, towards the Empress Hotel.

The architect's cost of the model would be about $1,800, of which the city would likely pay about $600, he said.

Young said the proposal made by the Reid people Thursday night was a "very superficial overview" of the development, which was basically an embodiment of the city's proposed building standards and Reid's ideas for the concept of the september.

Young said the concept involves two towers set reasonably far apart and consisting of eight and 12 storeys, or eight and 13, or some similar combination.

The buildings height definitely will not exceed 14 storeys, he said, since that is the height limit contained in city council's proposed bylaw amendments for building standards in the downtown area. The amendments will be discussed at a public hearing Thursday night.

The concept will likely resemble Toronto's city hall project, Young said, in that the towers may be curved in towards far enough apart to leave a good view from Bastion Square of the Inner Harbor.

Young said the Reid proposal is by no means firmed up either by the city or by Reid himself.

The progress made at the Thursday night meeting was that the architect has now been pointed in the right direction, he said, and can proceed with more detailed plans for the development.

The city will want to take a closer look at whatever model is built and detailed working drawings before any final decisions are made, he saids

But Cemeteries Act regula-tions originally applying to the cemeteries specified that factories must be re-invested into the funds in any case until they reach mandatory levels at which time funds could be used for upkeep.

In addition, the PUC grant-ed the cemeteries waivers of about 80 per cent of their care

The answers state that costs of the trusteeship have to-talled $21,000 for an administrator's salary since April 1970 and are a charge against income of the company but the legislature shows sales of plots declined badly over the 11-year period.

At Colwood, for instance, sales totalled $182,442 in 1959 and $44,000 in 1970.

Evening Classes: They Pay Their Way

my wife and I set out as usual for a two-hour classroom stint. ## MORE SLIDES LIKELY AS WEATHER WARMS

VANCOUVER (CP) - Rail and road traffic was moving through the Rogers Pass in mountainous east-central British Columbia today but rising temperatures brought the threat of further transportation disruptions in the province.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mollie C. Freedman calls handwriting what she thinks it is — "brain-writing."

A certified master graphoanalyst, Miss Freeman makes part of her living analyzing the "brain-writing" of persons applying for jobs or being considered for promotion within corporations nationwide.

She also teaches hand-writing analysis and lectures on the fine points of the science.

Miss Freedman, a graduate of the Chicago Institute of Applied Science, said corporations she does work for include life insurance companies and public utilities. She gets batches of samples of band-writing — from one to three pages per brain-writer.

"I never meet the people involved," she said in an interview. "And I believe my reports are just one factor considered in saying "Yes, hire' or 'Yes, promote' — or the opposite.

Her services for hire include anlyzing the handwriting of engaged couples. The analysis usually is the gift from one set of parents or some relative,

"No one has failed to get married on account of a report showing incompatability as revealed by handwriting analysis," Miss Freedman said.

"But I hellow if more researched handwriting analysis,"

"But I believe if more persons had handwriting analyzed before marriage it would help to give partners a better un-derstanding of one another — and a greater chance of workderstanding of one another — and a greater chance of working together for harmony."

Though Miss Freedman's fees for services vary, roughly a page of handwriting analyzed costs $50, two pages, $75 or more, and three pages, $150 or more.

Miss Freedman said her brain-writing analyses also are used in vocational guidance, child guidance, credit evaluation, forgery and questioned documents.

Miss Freedman says:

If final strokes of a signature are the same weight as the rest, a person is declaive.

If final structure strokes are lighter than the rest, rest, a person is decisive.

If final structure strokes are lighter than the rest, signer is indecisive.

Diplomatic persons make an "n" and "m" with stairs going down.

Persons who dot the "!" exactly show patience.

Persons who dot the "!" with marks that resemble

"Most persons dot the "I" with abort sparks," Miss Freedman said.

Sexy Knees Next Aim For Lib Cosmetics'

NEW YORK (UPI) - We have Women's Liberation. Now we're heading for "liberat-

One expert on constimer testes and buying says that both sexes will begin to accept new varieties in the whole world of body decoration and that the cosmetics business, already a multi-billion dollar one, will keep growing.

"Liberated cosmetics" is the term used by Dr. Ernest Dichter, who is head of the Institute for Motivational Research. Inc., with headquarters at Croton-On-Hudson, N.Y.

"The field for cosmetics is as big as the female (and male) body," says Dr. Dichter. "New parts of the body — such as the knee — will be decorated and embellished.

"For example, a French company has been developing stencils to 'tatoo' any part of the body you want.

"In the future also, cosmetics will be in competition with drugs and psychiatry. We may have anti-depression perfumes . . . cosmetics for introverts and extroverts . . for more specialized occasions . . honeymoon cosmetics, perhaps."

Drop Immoral Concept

Dichter takes a look at new attitudes in the cosmetics world in his "Findings," an oc-casional newsletter from his Hudson Valley

He says the cosmetics industry has a whole new growth potential if it stops selling its multitude of products as "once a week items, as extravagant and overly romantic, alightly immoral ... and make them an everyday necessity for coping with modern life that is really a part of nature..." Part of the whole change of attitude, he indicates, is woman's desire for the "na-tural" coametics and their use as an every-

"Many advertisers are still depicting cos-metics as ff applying them was still special, earth shaking," he says.

Dichter calls on the industry to look at cosmetics the way a woman does, not as a "glamour product that will give her (the woman) the prince she is dreaming about, but as very practical everyday makeup that provides a more desirable 'front' to other people" and to herself.

Fun in Rubbing On

'It's possible,' says Dichter, "that a fu-ture cosmetic may not promise more beauti-ful skin' — merely a lot of fun putting it on while you take your time.

"At the same time, marketers may well consider cosmetics products with a built-in, tactile, sensuous pleasure. The modern woman needs time for herself.

cleansing and creaming was making the inis-take of calling itself "instant."
